RICHARDS GARDENS

MRS. R. E. RICHARDS

423 East Franklin Street, Greencastle, Indiana

Daylilies are invaluable for the summer garden. By choosing both early and late varieties one can have bloom from May until frost.

They are not particular about soil but repay one for plenty of moisture and nourishment, though they are very drouth desistant. While they will grow in shade they need sun part of the day to produce bloom and do even better in full sun. They do not require frequent division so space them from 2-3 feet apart to permit formation of good clumps. They are quite hardy when established but should have some protection the first winter. The evergreen kinds do not remain evergreen in northern sections and for best results should be spring planted. Dormant kinds may be planted in either spring or fall. Mix some well rotted manure in the holes when planting or compost with a handful of balanced fertilizer.

Join THE HEMEROCALLIS SOCIETY for helpful information. Dues $3.50 annually. Mrs. Daisy L. Ferrick, 416 Arter Avenue, Topeka, Kansas.
